Japanese Wines

From Grape Juice to Exquisite Vintages

SPEAKER

DATE: Wednesday, July 13, 2011, 7:00 PM

Nick Hasumi

Nick Hasumi, a vineyard owner, will discuss how winemakers in Japan over the past decade have been making the transition from producing wines from imported grape juice to learning that grape growing and wine making are synonymous. The shift has been dramatic, he says, and superior wines are resulting.

Prior to becoming a vineyard owner and a city councilman, Nick Hasumi had been an export manager, a globe trotter and an interpreter and Asian assistant for the Los Angeles Dodgers.
